The Danger of Water Intoxication

Swimming dogs are at risk of ingesting too much water

JoAnna Lou

May 28, 2012

Last week a friend's dog had a close call with water intoxication. Her crew was playing in a local river when one of her Border Collies emerged staggering and vomiting liquid.

Symptoms quickly worsened on the way to the vet, but after a few harrowing days, the dog was fortunate to make a full recovery.

Apparently the poor pup ingested too much water while repeatedly diving into the river, mouth open, trying to catch a ball. Drinking too much causes electrolyte levels to drop, thinning blood plasma and leading to swelling of the brain and other organs.

Before I learned about water intoxication, I thought that playing in the lake was safe if your dog was a strong swimmer. But now I know to be mindful of how my guys interact with the water and to force them to take ample breaks. Dogs can even drink too much water from playing with a lawn sprinkler.

Unfortunately water intoxication progresses quickly. Now that summer is officially here, it's important to review the signs so you can get an affected dog to the vet as soon as possible.

Symptoms include lack of coordination, lethargy, nausea, bloating, vomiting, dilated pupils, glazed eyes, light gum color, and excessive salivation. Advanced symptoms include difficulty breathing, collapsing, loss of consciousness, and seizures.

As the weather gets warmer, stay safe. Water intoxication can affect both people and our pups.

RAVEN'S RULE

Surprising cause of death in teen boating accident creates 'Raven's Rule'

LAKE WACCAMAW, NC (WECT) - Investigators originally assumed she'd drowned, but new details have emerged about the tragic death of a Columbus County teenager.

16-year-old Raven Little-White died in August after a boating accident on Lake Waccamaw. The medical examiner's report lists "drowning" as the probable cause of death, but a toxicology report that came back later revealed Raven had actually succumbed to carbon monoxide poisoning.

The Accident

Raven was on the boat with nine other kids ranging in age from 11-17 on the evening of the accident. District Attorney Jon David said they were not drinking, but just out having fun when they made a fatal error to accommodate the number of people on the inboard ski boat.

"There were two young women sitting on the back of the swim platform, and as they were driving along, one of the young women began to get woozy, and began walking toward the cockpit area, and her friends were helping her, realizing she was in distress, and something was wrong, and at that same time period Raven, who was sitting on the back of the boat just sort of slipped into the water," David explained.

The carbon monoxide fumes from the motor are most intense at the back of the boat where Raven was sitting. Investigators estimate the boat was traveling at the relatively slow speed of 10 miles per hour, preventing the toxic fumes from dissipating more quickly in the surrounding air.

Even though the back of the boat is known as the "kill zone," experts say many people assume the danger has to do with being injured by the propeller. Wildlife Patrol Officer Matt Criscoe says many people are not aware of the potentially deadly fumes.

"If we're on patrol and we see people hanging out the back of the boat, we'll actually make a stop and just make them aware of it and educate them about it, and a lot of times people don't know about it until we make them aware," Criscoe said.

While there is a risk of carbon monoxide poisoning from the motor of any boat, authorities say the danger is elevated on an inboard ski boat.

With an inboard motor, the motor is underneath the boat, and the exhaust fumes come up underneath the swimmer's platform, especially when the boat is idling or traveling at a slow speed. With an outboard motor, the motor is attached to the back of the boat, and the fumes are slightly further away.

“Raven’s Rule”

Raven was a beautiful and popular girl, remembered by friends for her laughter, her caring personality, and her love of Lilly Pulitzer clothing. The fashion house was so touched by her story that they designed a pattern in Raven’s honor.

Raven played volleyball and ran cross country at Whiteville High School, loved swimming and the outdoors and was active in her church youth group at the time of her death.

“The children who were out on the boat that day, they lost one of their best friends, and they’re having a difficult time continuing to process that,” District Attorney Investigator Scott Pait explained of the impact of Raven’s death.

Pait said the family is still so grief-stricken they cannot speak publicly but have encouraged the District Attorney's office to warn others of the risk.

The District Attorney's office and NC Wildlife decided to name part of the boater safety curriculum after Raven.

Instructors will now share the tragic story of her death and incorporate “Raven’s Rule” into the lesson when teaching students to avoid the rear area of a boat when it is in operation. It’s hoped the real-life example will help people remember the danger and take it more seriously.

Rosemont's 9th Annual Wine & Art Festival

Saturday, June 17th
10:00 a.m. - 5:00 p.m.

It's only one weekend away! It's our biggest event of the year - the Annual Wine & Art Festival - held on the lawn of Rosemont!

This week and next we will continue to raffle off amazing pieces of art, jewelry and more on our Facebook page, so please be sure to follow us!

Here are some more new artists who will be joining us this year:

We'll have Beautiful Beaded Jewelry from Anne Britt of Ebony, VA. Anne is a self-taught beader who loves working with color and texture and exploring new techniques. She retired to Lake Gaston with her husband a little over one year ago. Beading became a passion for Anne about six years ago. Her creations consist of beaded jewelry made using seed beads, pearls, and crystals.

Woodworking from Tim Stone of Littleton, NC. Tim's retirement to the Lake Gaston area in 2004 gave him the opportunity to pursue his interest in woodturning that started with him taking a basic woodturning class. Other classes have since then followed. He is a member of the Woodturners Guild of North Carolina and the American Association of Woodturners.

We will be joined by Teresa Inge of Chesapeake, VA one of the authors behind "50 Shades of Cabernet." The book is a mysterious wine anthology, combining the talents of 18 experienced authors whose stories have made the USA Today's Bestsellers, Amazon's Top 10, and who have been nominated for national awards such as the Agatha, Macavity, and Silver Falchion.

Admission is free for everyone, so bring all of your friends, families and neighbors! If you'd like to enjoy wine during the day we will be selling a $5 commemorative glass with unlimited wine tastings throughout the day!
